Lloyd-George's Speech Alarms Washington; Statement Means Eternal War, German Press

American Officials View With Concern Ship Question

BEHEIVED IT WILL TURN OVER WORLD'S SHIPPING FOR WAR

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19.—(AP)—The speech of Lloyd George, premier of Great Britain, at the House of Commons, last night, has caused a great deal of concern in the United States. The speech was interpreted as a declaration of war against Germany, and it was believed that the world's shipping would be turned over to the United States for use in the war.

Lloyd-George's Speech Alarms Washington; Statement Means Eternal War, German Press

American Officials View With Concern Ship Question

BELEIEVED IT WILL TURN OVER WORLD'S SHIPPING FOR WAR

(The Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—Officials here regard with serious concern the statement made by Lloyd-George yesterday in the British house of commons that all British shipping will be taken into the national service.

Officials believe at first glance that such action would turn over the majority of the world's shipping to war purposes, and that the effect on American commerce will be problematical. It is thought that the effect of the announced British move would complicate the submarine situation because of the confusion it would cause between public vessels not entitled to guarantee and private ships entitled to warning.

(The Associated Press.)

Military operations appear to have low tide.

The Russian Rumanian campaign seems nearly ended.

Comparative quiet prevails on all fronts.

Little except artillery duels and skirmishes are reported.

Berlin says several Russian attacks have been repulsed in northern Rumania.

Paris reports heavy artillery fighting near Lovement and Chambrettes on the Verdun front.

Rain and fog hindered operations in Macedonia.

NOTED NEWSPAPER
PARAGRAPHER DIES
ON MEXICAN BORDER

(The Associated Press.)

EL PASO, Dec. 20.—Sergeant Robt. E. Gonzales, of the Second South Carolina regiment, died at Fort Bliss hospital last night. He had been ill but a few days. Sergeant Gonzales was the son of William E. Gonzales, American minister to Cuba, and was widely known as paragrapher of the Columbia state. He was 28 years of age.

FEDERAL JUDGE DIES; ILL ONLY ONE HOUR

(The Associated Press.)

SAVANNAH, Ga., Dec. 20.—United States District Judge William Wallace Lambdin died here today after an illness of one hour. Acute indigestion or heart failure was the cause. Judge Lambdin was 55 years of age and was born in Georgia. He was affiliated with the Methodist church. He graduated from the University of Georgia in 1879, and taught in the Atlanta public schools until 1888, when he began the practice of law. Judge Lambdin was appointed to the Federal bench for the Southern district of Georgia by President Wilson March 3, 1915.

Russia Faces Greatest Crisis of Any Belligerent Power on Account of Influx of Refugees

(The Associated Press.)

PETROGRAD, Dec. 20.—Russia is faced by a new refugee problem. Thousands of Rumanians are abandoning everything and fleeing before both the German and Bulgarian invaders. These refugees have been pouring into Odessa, Kiev and other southern Russian cities.

The problem appears the most difficult facing any belligerent since the war began, even considering the invasion of Belgium.

Since the war began Russia has received a refugee population exceeding the combined population of the Scandinavian countries.

NEWS CHRISTMAS EDITION CARRIES A MESSAGE OF HOLIDAY GOOD CHEER

In presenting its second 1916 Christmas edition the Daily News desires to add its sincere wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to all its friends and patrons. With two feature numbers, the first on Saturday containing 24 pages and the one today of 28 pages, making a total of 52 pages, the Daily News proves its leadership in the Daytona field.

Carrying page after page of local advertising, the Daily News demonstrates that it is the afternoon paper that reaches the people when they are in the mood to read and is, therefore, the best for the advertiser.

Every advertisement merits the careful consideration of the public and the articles and special features are varied and worthwhile. A larger paper could have been printed but these are the days of economy in the use of white paper—necessarily if the standard of the paper is to be maintained.

The success of this Christmas edition demonstrates the successful policies that have been pursued by the merchants, jobbers and manufacturers of Daytona during the year, with their faith in advertising and their assurance to their customers and the public generally of a renewed resolution to give true service throughout the new year.

(The Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—Two hundred Americans who have been detained at Syria and Palestine by the Turkish military authorities have been granted permission to leave via Beirut. They must remain at Beirut for a month, however, to make valueless any information they may possess. The American cruiser Des Moines will take them from Beirut.

BERLIN NEWSPAPER
SAYS REPARATION
TALK WORTHLESS

(The Associated Press.)

AMSTERDAM, Holland, Dec. 20.—The statements of Premier Lloyd-George in the British house of commons yesterday means eternal war if the entente allies expect to postpone peace until the armies of the central powers are conquered, declares the Berlin Lokal Anzeiger. The paper also declares that the statements of the British premier about reparation are worthless.

British Press Approves.

LONDON, Dec. 20.—The British press approved Premier Lloyd-George's reply to the German peace proposal. The general comment this morning was that if Germany really wants peace she will state upon what terms when the reply of the entente allies is received.

Princess Amorita, Dancer With the "Garden of Allah"

With the grace of the Orient and the polish of the Occident Princess Amorita, the petite brunette who interprets the revues of Terpsichore in the Garden of Allah, stands foremost among the dancers in the amusement world. Her act is augmented by other numbers and is one of the features which has done much to make a success of the Kennedy shows now appearing in Daytona. For the remaining three days of the engagement there will be a continuous performance, starting each afternoon at 2 o'clock. Both afternoon and night each attraction will be in full operation. The last performance will be late Friday night, after which the Kennedy shows move to Key West, where they are billed to open Christmas day.

While in Daytona Princess Amorita is giving the same dance which has won much favor at society entertainments in the north and east. She is the poetry of motion, has perfect control of every muscle of her body and moves with a unison of purpose which never fails to evoke the approval of her audience. In private life she has her warm circle of friends and is both refined and well educated. She has visited every country of the world and practically every city in the United States. Her act has been witnessed at every state fair in the union and she has always been able to play return engagements.

Construction of Many Miles of Fine Highways Bringing Motor Tourists to Florida

Judging from the number of inquiries from various sources for information on Florida, good roads, hotel accommodations and the hotel reservations already made motor travel in the state this winter will be far in excess of that of any previous year. The good roads movement in Florida and the publicity it has received is probably the true cause, were the travel by automobile accurately accounted for.

Throughout the state, approximately 15 per cent of the highways are paved. Practically every county in the state has already voted bond issues far into the millions of dollars to carry on the work of good roads and better transportation facilities. Ten years ago hardly a town in Florida was accessible to another by automobile or hardly other than on horseback. Now all are connected with a network of brick, asphalt and hard surfaced roads. The movement has been of such great proportions that its momentum is carrying it on at a rapid rate and some of the finest roads in the world are being constructed or are under contract at the present time.

Many country roads in Florida are built nine feet wide, with a three-foot shoulder on either side, planted in heavy wire grass. In such a manner passing is made easy for the tourist. Few are the sharp turns and dangerous places in any of the Florida roads fit for automobile travel. The line of least resistance is usually followed which, with some exceptions, results in nearly a straight road.

Good roads are always conducive to touring. In addition to good roads, an ideal climate is offered the tourist who comes to Florida in the winter. Never is there a day when travel is impossible on account of the elements. No trouble is to be experienced in freezing—all in all, conditions could not be improved upon, were they made to order. The scenery in any part of the state of Florida is unsurpassed. Hills are unknown and the consequence is the most mileage from a gallon of gasoline is possible.

The chief tributary to Florida from the north is the Dixie highway, running into central and also east Florida, and continuing to Miami. Another important highway in Florida is the Jacksonville-Tampa highway, via Winter Haven, which involves a portion of the Paradise loop.

From Jacksonville down the east coast there is eighty-one miles of brick in good condition, and fourteen miles of shell through St. Augustine to Daytona. A new road is under construction between Ormond and Seabreeze. Construction is also going on between the Knox & Beed grove and the St. Johns county line, and a new bridge has recently been finished across the Tomoka river.

A most exhilarating trip is the run on the beach from Ormond down to Seabreeze. There is a runway at Ormond which motorists use to get on the beach, and exits at Seabreeze and Daytona Beach. There are no speed limits on the beach and motorists are limited in their rates of travel only by the capacity of their machines and their own inclinations.

Leaving Daytona there is a bridge under construction south of Port Orange and a section of road building between Oak Hill and Fort Pierce. All of this work should be finished by January 1, and there will then be an open road, all hard-surfaced and in good condition straight through to Miami.

Between Daytona and DeLand a brick road is being built, and this should be open by January 1. Polk county is building 150 miles of sand-asphalt highway; when finished, the entire trunkline from Kissimmee through Auburndale, Lakeland and Plant City to Tampa will be hard-surfaced. As the road from DeLand through Orlando to Kissimmee is now all good brick, the motorist can cross the peninsula from Daytona to Tampa on all good road.

Tourists will be able to follow the Tamiami Trail from Tampa to Miami when the gigantic task now under way is completed. This highway leads through the much talked of Everglades and will offer a motor trip not to be surpassed by any other trip in the world from a scenic standpoint and from the standpoint of comfortable travel. No speed limit is observed on this road, which is being constructed.

The great series of road bonds are directly in favor of the automobile tourist. Already it has begun to tell and in the future Florida is destined to be the greatest automobile tourist state in the United States. The scenic highways erected at a cost of millions through the heart of a state unsurpassed for climate conditions is assurance enough.

Take a good look at the list below. When it comes to expenditures for good roads the claim may be justly laid that Florida is well up in the list. A total of $13,723,421.37, all spent or to be spent, places the state directly in the lead. She is spending more per capita than any other state in the Union. Counties that have voted good roads bond issues are as follows:

Alachua	$40,000.00
Brevard	150,000.00

"THE DIVIDEND" AT NEW DAYTONA

This story revolves about the activities of a money-grubbing multi-millionaire who with one hand takes from the poor and with the other gives, and whose whole motive in life is the acquisition of money and dividends for his investors.

At a stockholders' meeting he promises unprecedented dividends at the end of the fiscal year. This promise he makes good, but only through the reduction of wages and an increase in rentals on the company's tenement property.

This capitalist reaps another dividend upon which he had not counted. His son, whom he had neglected in his mad pursuit of profits, has become an opium fiend and sinks to the lowest depths of degeneracy. There are other dividends that the capitalist and his coterie of financiers had not bargained for and which could not be totaled in dollars and cents, but had totaled countless thousands of human wrecks and untold misery.

The conclusion of the story follows out of the natural laws of retribution as will be shown at the New Daytona theatre Thursday.

Shows the Country's Growth.

The report of the first census is contained in an octavo volume of 56 pages. Nowadays in a decade the census bureau issues 100 or more quarto volumes with more than 400,000 pages.

JUST VEAL.

VEAL CUTLETS.—Having parboiled the cutlets three-quarters of an hour, they may be either dipped in eggs and then in breadcrumbs, or they may be rubbed well with flour and fried in lard or bacon drippings.

But the cook who tickled the palate of the great near queen of France, De Maintenon, had another way of cooking veal cutlets, and it is well worth the additional time and pains it takes to do it. This cook half fried the cutlets, then dipped them in a seasoning of breadcrumbs, parsley, shallots, pepper and salt and the yolk of an egg and then broiled them in clean writing paper over a bed of cool coals.

For those who like the flavor veal cutlets in curry are delicious. The cutlets should be dipped into a mixture made of the yolk of an egg, four tablespoonfuls of breadcrumbs, two teaspoonfuls of curry powder and salt. They should then be fried and when done to a golden brown put in the oven to keep warm while the sauce is made. To prepare this mix one tablespoonful each of curry powder, flour and butter. Work into a paste in the pan in which the cutlets have been fried. Moisten with a cupful of water and season with cayenne pepper and salt. Let it thicken and add to the cutlet.

Minc'd Veal.—A delightful way of cooking veal is what our grandmothers called minc'd veal. The veal should be previously cooked and should then be cut up into small pieces and flavored with finely shredded lemon peel, nutmeg and salt. Add a dozen table spoonfuls of white stock—that is chicken or veal stock, or, if preferable, milk. Let this simmer without boiling. Now prepare a deep dish with diamonds of toast around the edge and on each piece of toast a small piece of lemon slice. Rub a tablespoonful of flour into a tablespoonful of butter, add it to the veal and let it cook for a minute or so longer. Now pour the mixture over the dish and garnish.

Veal Loaf.—Veal loaf has a more toothsome flavor than beef loaf, and here is one of the best ways of preparing this dish: Add to three pounds of finely chopped veal three beaten eggs and a quarter of a cupful of melted butter. Add one tablespoonful of pepper, two teaspoonfuls of salt, three tablespoonfuls of cream, one teaspoonful of onion juice and a half cupful of fine breadcrumbs. Turn into a small baking pan and press down till the veal takes the shape of the pan, then turn out into another baking dish and bake for two hours slowly, basting occasionally with melted butter.

"THE WITCH" AT ARCADE THEATER

Few plays that are being filmed today, carry such a powerful story as does "The Witch," in which William Fox presents Miss Nance O'Neil, America's greatest emotional actress at the Arcade theatre.

"The Witch" is based on Victorian Sardou's famous play, "The Sorceress." The plot is laid in Mexico and Mr. Frank Powell, the director of the picture has spared neither time nor expense in order to surround his work with that atmosphere of color and romance that are so effective when properly presented.

A Mexican village was built outside the Fort Lee studio that cost thousands of dollars in order that all the street scenes would positively be correct. A thousand persons took part in one of the street scenes alone, where Zora is passed over the heads of the infuriated mob and burned at the stake.

The story is woven about Dr. Fernandez, a physician who is believed by Mendoza, the military governor, to possess occult powers. Mendoza is in love with Dr. Fernandez' beautiful daughter, Zora, which part is taken by Miss O'Neil. Failing to have the girl care for him, he uses the theory that the father has occult powers to injure him. So great becomes the feud between the two that a faction of insurrectionists arises which is headed by the doctor and the Government is attacked.

The doctor is killed in battle. In the meantime Dolores, the daughter of the Governor is suffering from somnambulism. She desires to be cured, but dislikes to inform her father, or her lover, that she is so afflicted. Finally her old nurse makes the fact known to Zora, who possesses powers inherited from her father. Dolores submits to being treated by Zora, and is cured.

At the time that Zora heals Dolores, she does not know that Dolores is engaged to be married to Riquies, her sweet heart. Several days later, Zora learns that the wedding is set. She goes into rage, contrives to get into the palace in the night and hypnotizes Dolores. Shortly thereafter Zora is denounced as a witch and is carried away by an angry mob to be burned at the stake. Just before the torch is set, the old nurse makes known to the Governor that his daughter has this falling of walking in her sleep and that she is in a trance from which she cannot be aroused.

Also the old nurse informs the Governor that the only person who can cure her is Zora. At the last instant, the Governor stays the burning of Zora at the stake and promises Zora her freedom if she will bring Dolores from her cataleptic state. Zora, believing the promise goes to the palace and arouses the girl. When Dolores is found to be safe, the Governor goes back on his word and again imprisons her.

Riquies who realizes that he loves Zora more than Dolores, runs away with her. The two are captured after a desperate fight and in the end Zora is put to death by burning at the stake. The story is rife with strong situations and wonderful scenes.

This vehicle furnishes an endless playground for the wonderful emotional talents of Nance O'Neil. Throughout, it abounds in strange and startling situations, which are lavishly and beautifully staged. Miss O'Neil is supported by a strong cast that sustains her wonderful work in every respect. The story abounds in thrills; it is of the red blood kind that sets the heart thumping. It is one continuous series of powerful situations in which loves, romance, passion and intrigue are powerfully blended. It is laid in a rugged and romantic country, and nothing has been left undone to make this picture one of the greatest successes of the year.

Service.

The aristocracy of the future is in sight. It will not be an aristocracy founded on might; it will not be an aristocracy based on the accident of birth; it will not be an aristocracy by virtue of possession, whether of knowledge or of wealth; but it will be an aristocracy of service.—Matt. S. Hughes.

About the Wedding Ring.

The wedding ring is of gold to signify the nobility and durability of affection. The form is round to imply that love should never end. The place is on the third finger of the left hand, where the ancients thought there was a vein that came directly from the heart, and where it is always in view. The third finger being a finger least used, the ring may be least subject to wearing out.

"EACH PEARL A TEAR" AT CRYSTAL THURSDAY

Fannie Ward, the brilliant Lasky star, who will be the Paramount attraction at the Crystal Thursday in the Jesse L. Lasky production of "Each Pearl a Tear," was curled up on a couch in her big dressing room, and there were flowers everywhere. The room resembled a rose garden more than it did a boudoir.

"I enjoyed doing 'Each Pearl a Tear,'" smiled Miss Ward, "because it is what I call a constructive play; that is, it builds up a better feeling for the photodrama, and in a way will present a strong lesson and be a warning to a great many people. It is a play that besides being intensely interesting and thrilling, teaches a sincere lesson without a lot of preachments and false pathos."

"You see," she explained, raising herself on her elbow, "I play the role of the daughter of the old employee of a very wealthy and unscrupulous man. This man, knowing the average woman's fondness for jewelry, employs that means to entice them to him. He persuaded me to wear a valuable string of pearls,—(which, by the way, I loaned the company out of my own personal collection)—and then intimated that I have lost them. My father having died from a stroke of paralysis, I am forced to work as this man's stenographer to repay him for his loss, and all the time he has the pearls concealed in his safe. I found this out, and how I eventually ruined him and am won by the man I love, is brought about in a way I have never seen done before, and I don't believe you have."

"Yes," Miss Ward replied in answer to a question, "I had a very nice vacation in New York, but I am certainly glad I am not there now. I went there principally to lay in a new stock of gowns, and according to my friends, I bought everything in sight—but this is not so, as there is only one designer in the country whom I patronize, and I take only his best creations. I did get some very nice frocks while there, and every one of them will be displayed before long."

"They have not selected the picture I am to do next, but I want to be a country girl if I can, and run around in bare feet and overalls. I had some pictures taken like that the other day, and there is nothing I would like better than a tomboy part and some day I may get my wish."

MRS. J. B. DOWNING CLAIMED BY DEATH

John B. Downing writes the News from Middleport, Ohio, Monday, Dec. 18th, stating that his mother died last week, and was buried Saturday, Dec. 16th. Mr. Downing added that he would mail a copy of the local paper containing a notice of his mother's death.

Mrs. Downing is well known in Daytona and vicinity, having spent a number of winters here with her husband, Major J. B. Downing, who died several years ago. The major was widely known through his talented playing of the violin and his courtesy in sharing the pleasure of his gift with others. Mrs. Downing as not visited Daytona since the major's death. Her death will be learned with regret by many friends here.

THE WEATHER

FOR FLORIDA: Rain tonight; warmer central and northeast portions, colder in northwest portion; Thursday fair, except rain south portion, colder north portion.

The western low pressure area has advanced southward and this morning extended in the form of a U-shaped depression from the lakes to the plains with a center of disturbance over Arkansas. An energetic high pressure area is pushing southward over the plains states. Rain occurred during the last 24 hours from the middle Gulf coast to Kentucky and snow from the lakes to the central plains and northward over the Rockies.

A severe cold wave is pushing southward over the plains states. The zero line extends southward to southern Kansas, while it is 25 degrees below zero over North Dakota. Temperatures here, then, temporarily, from the Missouri eastward. The winds are light variable to easterly on the lower Atlantic, becoming moderate southeast only on the middle Gulf.

Rain and warmer weather is indicated for this vicinity tonight; Thursday fair and colder.

INFORMAL OPENING BAGGETT-WETHERBY STORE TOMORROW

The informal opening of the Baggett-Wetherby Co.'s furniture store on Magnolia avenue will take place Thursday morning. The store is in the Adler block is well suited for the display of home furnishings and presents an attractive appearance. The stock is entirely new and comprises everything which is needed to furnish a modern home. Owing to the proximity of Christmas, arrangement has been made to handle the rush of buyers who favor useful gifts which may be secured at a furniture store.

The opening of the new store in Daytona will not in any way conflict with the operation of the Daytona Beach store of the Baggett-Wetherby Co.

Tuberculosis Deadly.
In a modern battle 100,000 men may be killed and wounded, but the tubercle bacillus slaughters 147,000 of our citizens yearly, and 1,500,000 remain infected, the greater number of whom will die of tuberculosis.

THE MECHANICAL FORCE OF THE NEWS

The mechanical force of the News office for the season was completed Monday with the addition of George E. Schroeder, of Plant City, combination floor man. The mechanical department now includes in its personnel as fellow workers with Mr. Schroeder, H. M. Webb, popularly known as "Max" Webb, of Monticello, Ga., machinist operator; O. P. (Brag) Bragg, of Jacksonville, ad. man; John Kratzer, of Cincinnati, Ohio, linotype operator, and E. A. Barnett, of Daytona, foreman. Mr. Barnett has been the employ of the Gazette-News company for nearly three years and Mr. Webb was engaged through last season. The other members of the force are new men, but are capable and experienced and all are working in the best of harmony and accord toward the making of a paper as near perfect as possible from the mechanical standpoint.

LOW RAILROAD RATES FOR INAUGURATION OF GOV. S. J. CATTS

TALLAHASSEE, Dec. 20.—The Seaboard Air Line railway and the Florida East Coast railway have advised the chairman of the transportation committee, J. Will Yon, that they will publish a rate of three cents per mile plus thirty-five cents for the round trip, from all points on their line to Tallahassee, account of the inauguration of Hon. Sidney J. Catts as governor on January 2. The rates will be on sale December 31, January 1 and 2, return limit January 4.

All other principal lines of road have been written to by the chairman, but nothing definite has yet been had from them, but no doubt they will follow the other two lines named and publish the same rate.

The financial committee and other committees at the capital having in hand arrangements for the inauguration have been at work and have things in such shape as will assure the biggest inauguration at Florida's capital yet. If finances are any sign it will be the biggest success for the fund contributed by citizens here for the expenses of the occasion is larger than it has ever been before. Great plans are being made for the inaugural ball and society folks in large numbers are expected to be here for that.

E. M. Dougherty, manager of the Jacksonville Decorating company, has been designated as the official decorator, and has already arrived with his material for decorations. J. Stuart Lewis, chairman on arrangements has received advices that a half dozen brass bands will be here to take part in the parade and furnish music for the day.

Official figures show that fogs are more frequent on the coasts of Maine and New Hampshire than on any other parts of the coasts of the United States.

How Much Dust in Air?
A scientist is using an ingenious new method of ascertaining just how much dust and smoke the atmosphere contains. A ribbon of filler paper is stretched over a small slit in the side of a hollow brass cylinder, and the air is passed through the paper by exhausting the interior of the cylinder. After a half hour's exposure the ribbon is automatically moved on and a fresh surface exposed.

BEAUTIFUL SELECTION OF PICTURES MAY BE SEEN AT ART EXHIBIT

The Elson art exhibit opened at the Casino Bargoyne this morning, with its display of more than 200 pictures, for the benefit of art in the Daytona public schools.

The display is made up of beautiful photographs of historical scenes, places and characters and of direct reproductions from the finest pictures of the great masters, some of which date back for several centuries. The greater part of the pictures are finished in a sepia tone and are indeed beautiful. A few have been reproduced in the natural colors and are very pleasing to the eye. In this exhibit are exact reproductions of some of the most famed and costly pictures in the world today. Any one of them would add greatly to the beauty of a schoolroom or hall.

ALL TIMES OF DAY

Tuesday the contractors finished the small ridge-over Murray creek on the Daytona-New Smyrna road and that highway which has been closed to travel for some weeks except in the early morning hours and after 5:00 o'clock in the evening, is now open to travel at all hours of the day. Much inconvenience has been experienced by the work on constructing bridges on this road and it will be welcome news to all that traffic is again resumed.

Commissioner Jerome D. Maley is authority for the statement that the Daytona-DeLand road will be in good condition by New Year's day, although it will probably be the middle of January before the 13 miles of brick on the west end of the highway will be completed.

The east nine miles of the road will be of asphaltic concrete but work of construction on this section will not be commenced until after the close of the tourist season.

"SAVE-A-BABY" CARD PARTY GIVEN AT MAGNOLIA HOTEL

The "Save-a-Baby" card party given at the Magnolia hotel from 2:30 to 5:00 o'clock Tuesday afternoon was a very pleasant social affair, although the nearness of Christmas prevented as large an attendance as would probably have resulted in response to a call for assistance for this popular charity under other conditions. Both auction bridge and 500 were enjoyed, there being four tables devoted to the former and two to the latter.

The first prize at bridge was secured by Miss Bose and the second by Mrs. S. H. Hallock.

At 5:00 the first prize was won by Mrs. Ottmar Jarecki and the second by Miss Hazel Nelson.

Light refreshments were served at the conclusion of the cards.

Mrs. Celeste Hinks, proprietor of the Magnolia hotel, has been giving a party of this kind during the season for the past three years for the benefit of the Florida Children's home in Jacksonville and now has filled 15 of the "dime" cards for that institution. There will be more in addition to the $15 which these cards represent, as friends of the home who were not present Tuesday are sending in contributions.

LUCAS, "LAND MAN"
MADE RAPID SALE

This morning at 9:45, A. C. Littleton came along in front of the real estate office of "Lucas the Land Man" and Mr. Lucas solicited the sale of his cottage on San Juan street. Mr. Littleton reluctantly told him to go ahead then, and inside of 60 minutes the "land man" had sold the property to W. G. Candler, of Candler, N. C., who took the 3:45 afternoon train for home, and will come back to Daytona January 1st, bringing with him his family, consisting of wife and little daughter, and will occupy their neat little cottage. Mr. Candler was simply hypnotized with Daytona's great beauty, insisting that it is the prettiest place he has ever seen in all his travels, having the greatest natural beauty of any other place within his knowledge.

HOLLY HILL HAS
BOND ELECTION

ISSUE OF BONDS FOR $25,000 FOR NEW SCHOOL BUILDING RATIFIED BY VOTE OF EIGHT TO TWO.

The election held at Holly Hill Tuesday on the question of issuing the school district, No. 32, was carried by a vote of 8 to 2.

The election calls for the issue of bonds in the sum of $25,000 for the erection, furnishing, etc., of a new school building in special tax district No. 32, Holly Hill.

The election was called by the county school board as the result of a petition from the citizens of the district, and the project appeared to meet with general approval, but the vote, as may be noted, was a very light one, only ten ballots being cast in the election. This apparent indifference probably arose from a feeling that there was no question of the result, rather than a change of heart on the part of those who had favored the measure.

CLARENDON

CLARENDON ARE 50 PER CENT
MORE THAN FOR ANY PAST OPENING DATE IS
JANUARY 6.

Reservations for rooms in the Clarendon for the coming season are not greater than any other in the history of the house. The rooms and suites are as good as if nothing occurred to take away from Florida this winter. The Clarendon will have a truly new season, in place of a very old one. "The Clarendon is a new house," said E. L. Foster, of the Clarendon company, in a recent interview. "It will have a hard time to keep many more than half of the guests that are coming to the winter, if the present outpouring to a realization."

The opening day of the Clarendon is being held on January 4 to 6. This slight change was made to the opening date might coincide with the opening of the new train schedule from New York and other northern points. Year as in all years past new guests are being placed in the Clarendon and guests of the hotel. Several very beautiful "jet" suits have been decorated for the coming season. These new apartments are the most comfortable and comfortable suites in the East. The Clarendon is a new house, and it is the most beautiful and expensive in the state of Florida. It is among the most remarkable private houses in the country.

SILVER BEACH CAMP FIRE MEETS AT J. E. WILLIAMS' HOME

Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Williams entertained the Silver Beach Camp fire at their home on Halifax avenue, north, on Monday evening.

The first part of the evening was devoted to the ceremonial work of the camp fire which was of especial significance as his was the last ceremonial meeting of the year.

After the staging of Camp Fire songs, a practical demonstration in bandaging was given by Dr. W. O. Upson. This was appreciated by all and was highly instructive. The subject was presented in such a way as to cause a feeling that art can be expressed even in putting on a bandage or that bandaging is an art.

At the close of the lesson a social hour was enjoyed and later refreshments were served, during which time the Victrola furnished beautiful music. The Christmas atmosphere prevailed in all the appointments of the evening.

Those present to enjoy the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Williams besides the Camp Fire, were Mr. and Mrs. S. Haigh, Harry Haigh, the Misses Dorothy Haigh and Mary Parsons, Dr. W. O. Upson and Mr. and Mrs. Varney.

HUGE MARBLE CROSS NOW ERECTED ON BURGOWNE GRAVE

HUGE STONE ARRIVED LAST SATURDAY AND WAS PLACED DURING FIRST OF WEEK—ANGEL IS NOW ON WAY.

The huge nine-foot cross for the C. G. Burgoyne grave in Pinewood cemetery, Daytona Beach, arrived last Saturday and was hoisted into place during the first days of the present week. This cross is a solid stone nine feet high, six feet wide and with shaft and arms, two feet in thickness and breadth, the whole weighing more than seven tons.

This immense stone was cut from white Georgia marble and rests on bases made from the same material. The stone comprising the second base, arrived about a month ago and is the largest in the monument, having a weight of nearly 10 tons.

The wall surrounding the grave is nearly completed. The decorative urns for corners of this wall have arrived and will be put in place during the week.

The seven-foot angel, which will stand in front of the large cross, is yet to arrive but is expected in a few days. This figure will hold a large tablet bearing a suitable inscription.

The Clark Monument company, of Jacksonville, designed and is erecting this monument at a cost of more than $50,000. It is the most beautiful and expensive in the state of Florida and is among the most remarkable private graves in the country.

SEABREEZE

U. S. Shelly went up to Jacksonville on the morning train to meet his daughter, Frances, who has been attending the Florida State Women's college at Tallahassee. A special meeting of the Daytona Beach town council will take place at the town hall on Butler boulevard tonight for the discussion of whatever matters may come before the council.

C. F. Jones, of Gainesville, was a visitor to the beach yesterday on a business trip. He is staying at a local hotel. He will probably return to the interior of the state tonight.

Workmen in the employ of the Central of Florida railway company were engaged during the first days of the present week in preparing the switch and track on Peninsula drive for the laying of the concrete-asphalt bricks, which arrived several days ago and are now piled along the street.

Thoughtful Husband.

A New Yorker tells of a married couple he observed at a county fair in Ohio. They found themselves in the center of quite a crowd near one of the amusement booths and the husband addressed his wife in this wise: "I say, dearie, I think you'd better give me the lunch basket. Don't you see, we are apt to lose each other in this crowd?"

Keeping Baby Quiet.

One mother used a clever device to keep her ever-restless youngster from crawling away all the time. She got a large soft gray blanket and cut out gay designs from the nursery books, which she sewed on the blanket. The pictures were made of linen, from one of those linen children's books sold in all the shops. The bright pictures attracted the child's attention, and he would sit for hours looking at them and picking at them. A baby fence around the rug completed the outfit.

Producing Colored Silks.

It has been found that by feeding silkworms partly on mulberry leaves and partly on osage leaves, being extremely careful with the allowances of the two foods, they can be made to produce red and blue silk. Colored thread has been obtained by feeding the worms on dyed leaves, but this method is not practical on a commercial scale. The natural color of raw silk is yellow or white.

Proper Hats Important.

Wearing hats in boyhood retards the growth and full development of the vessels that nourish the roots of the hair and accounts for the baldness in early life. An examination of the heads of boys will enable one to determine whose heads will be made bald by the wearing of hats and whose heads will not, with a reasonable degree of certainty. Hats should be made to measure like suits and be so constructed that the pressure will rest only upon the corners of the forehead and the center of the back of the head.

LAST HIGH SCHOOL PLAY IN OLD BUILDING NEXT SATURDAY

A delightful four-act Christmas play by Grace Richmond, "On Christmas Day in the Morning," will be presented by nine members of the Daytona Beach-Seabreeze high school at the schoolhouse on Halifax avenue, next Saturday night at 8 o'clock. The parents and friends of the school are asked to attend the last play that will be given in the old building. A basket ball game will be held after the play, between the school team and a team composed of town boys.

Mendelssohn's Great Oratorio.

Mendelssohn in 1837 read the nineteenth chapter of the first book of Kings and was so struck by the verse, "Behold the Lord passeth by," that he took it as the foundation of his oratorio, "Elijah," which was begun in 1840 and in 1846 sent for translation to England, where, on August 18 rehearsals were begun for the first presentation of this work.

AMERICAN TELEPHONE & TELEGRAPH COMPANY NOW HAS OPERATOR HERE, AND LONG DISTANCE SERVICE.

The American Telephone & Telegraph company has now had its lines connected up through the local exchange and if the franchise is ratified at the election to be held on January 16, Daytona will enjoy the best long distance service it is possible to have. It is a matter of common and general knowledge that the American Telephone & Telegraph company is the greatest telephone organization in the world and the service it extends to its patrons has always been granted to be of par excellence. The citizens in the state metropolis (Jacksonville) yesterday ratified the granting of the franchise to the American Telephone & Telegraph company by a vote of 784 to 72. This franchise ratified by the Jacksonville voters is similar to the one prepared by the city commissioners of Daytona, which will be voted on on January 16. It is the general belief of the business people and citizens generally that Daytona will approve the action of the commissioners by ratifying the franchise when the time comes to vote.

The franchise, passed unanimously by the city commissioners, is for long distance purposes only and will be connected with the local switchboard so that subscribers and long distance users will be able to get long distance connections in the same manner as they do at the present time. From the number of views expressed to the Daily News by citizens of all classes, it is generally conceded that the long distance service over the American lines will be far superior to any service that Daytona has ever had. This will be accomplished on account of increased facilities, type of equipment and manner of connections.

One outstanding feature of the franchise passed by the city commissioners is the important fact that it expressly prohibits the erection of poles on the east side of Beach street. It is learned that the American exchange will be what is termed an A-1 exchange, which means that the long distance operator will be able to make direct connections with most important towns and cities instead of having to pass the call to some other exchange. This, obviously, will be a great saving of time and will permit of calls being handled much more expeditiously.

Another Way to Rejuvenate Eggs.

A Maryland man has found a means of preserving eggs with a substance known as "liquid petrolatum," which he claims will rapidly penetrate eggs, when applied externally, and make them proof against moisture or bacteria. The preserving substance is a mixture of hydrocarbons. When properly treated, eggs can be preserved under a normal temperature for many weeks without deteriorating.—Popular Science Monthly.

This Beautiful Frock For Holiday Festivals

From the Pathe Florence Rose Fashion Film.

HERE is a gown for both maid and matron. The material is a bluish mauve striped in silver, and very cleverly have the stripes been manipulated. This overskirt hangs in two points in the front and a rounded point in the back, revealing in the front and at the sides the silver lace petticoat. It is caught in at the waist line and brought up to form the lower part of the corage, the upper being of the plain satin, and over all is draped a shawl of silver lace held at the waist line by a cluster of exquisitely shaded velvet cherries. Incidentally this draping of the lace should suggest to the knowing ones an idea for utilizing lace founcing without the necessity of cutting it.

Empire in cut are many of the latest chemises and combinations, and many of these have lace or net ruffles at the knee edge. ANNA MAY

Marriage and Social Laws to Be Introduced in Legislature

Daytona club women are staunch supporters of the movement which was begun and is being pushed by the Children's Home society to prohibit the marriage between epileptics, insane and feeble minded persons. A bill to that effect will be introduced at the next Florida legislative session. It is a modification of the one introduced two years ago which was rejected.

Three clauses of the original bill have been struck out, leaving only the three mentioned, which were not objected to by the legislators in 1915. The original bill contained provisions also against the marriage of drunkards, drug addicts and urinary diseases.

Supt. Marcus Fagg, of the society, pointed out that if this bill is not passed, the marriage of the classes referred to will soon result in the state facing a problem of caring for epileptic and feeble-minded children in a wholesale manner. However, it is believed that advocates of the bill in both houses will succeed in having it passed.

Commission to Report. Of unusual interest will be the report of the commission appointed by the governor to investigate the need of an institute for the care of epileptics and feeble-minded, provisions for which were made in 1915. This commission will recommend the establishment of such an institution and an appropriation of $50,000 for building. Mr. Fagg stated that such an institution is absolutely needed, and that few years from now it will take $500,000 to care for unfortunates of this character, unless the marriage law is passed.

The commission appointed to investigate the need of a mother's pension law in Florida will not make any recommendation, but request that it be allowed to continue further the investigations. To date the commission has met conditions which prompt it to believe that such a law would be unwise.

After Deserting Husbands. Another bill in which charitable organizations of the state are interested in, particularly the Children's Home society, applies to deserting husbands and fathers. The society secured a law last legislature making this a felony, which act succeeded in reducing the number of desertions about 25 per cent, but a more stringent law is necessary, it is claimed. In order to bring this about, a change in the constitution of the state which provides that the state cannot contribute to prisons must be secured. District work houses where deserting and worthless husbands can be sent and made to work for the state, while their wages are turned over to their families, is the substance of the proposed bill. It is modeled along the lines of the one in force in the District of Columbia, in one year $90,000 was paid out to families, whose head was serving time in the work house.

Skirts Join General Tendency to Go Higher

So far as the skirts of America go—which, as the readers know, is a trivial matter—there is no justification for the presence of tears in the strained eyes of the country's natural sight-seers. Paris, that center of fashion, fighters and fidgets, has brought sunshine into the hearts of experienced observers by announcing once and for 1917, that no skirt is to come within eighteen centimetres of the floor, sidewalk or stage during the winter or spring. How far they are to remain from the ceiling has not been computed. However, don't cheer boys, the poor girls are freezing. When Chicago got unusually windy the other day and announced that the obscure creators of that lake infested city had decided to lengthen skirts, the tired business men put in a perfectly frightful forenoon. It was, unquestionably, a blow to those who appreciate the beautiful. Imagine then the joy, relief and general friskiness which followed the international message that the skirt is emulating the cost of living and may likewise become almost out of the question—to put it mildly.

To Remove Stoppers.

When a glass stopper cannot be easily removed rap the neck of the bottle with some glass object. This sets up a sympathetic vibration and avoids breaking the receptacle in case one should heat it to loosen the stopper. Find an object of the same material as the stopper, if glass or metallic, and rap steadily on all parts around the stopper until it is loosened.

For You, Who Are Particular—T is Candy

As soon as you taste the wonderfully different flavors of the Page & Shaw Candy—with its indescribable flavor, which only the manufacturers of these sweets know how to produce—you will experience the candy revelation of a life time, you will understand why Page & Shaw's is called "The Candy of Excellence."

Page & Shaw Candy once tasted is never forgotten; its rich individual flavor lingers as a happy memory.

This year, like the past, Elks throughout the nation will bring happiness to many through their philanthropic work during the Christmas holidays. This year they expect to surpass other years, as they are now arranging to cheer thousands of poor children and their parents all over the country.

Curtis Gardiner, who is attending Stetson university in DeLand, came over from the county seat this morning to spend the Christmas holidays with his parents. Mr. and Mrs. George H. Gardiner, at their home on South Ridgewood avenue. He made the trip from DeLand by the Red Line auto bus, which is again making regular trips.

Rev. R. D. Harding arrived Tuesday afternoon from Dayton, Ky., to officiate, with Rev. S. L. Jackson, at the funeral this afternoon of Judge J. M. Tisdale of Dayton, who died Sunday morning at his winter home on South Palmetto avenue. Mr. Harding had been here for a week or ten days with Judge and Mrs. Tisdale and had just returned to Dayton when recalled to this city by the Judge's death. He leaves this afternoon, accompanying Judge Tisdale's remains to Lexington, Ky.

Decorations for the Tree.

A pretty decoration for Christmas which is so easily made that the little tots can do most of the work, is paper chains. Silver paper and blue paper make the prettiest. Cut the paper into four-inch squares, then cut the squares into strips one-fourth inch wide, and paste the ends of the little strips together, linking them as you go. Silver alone is very pretty, and alternate links of blue and silver give an attractive effect. The paper costs five cents a sheet, so the expense of the decoration is small.

Not Playing Favorites.

"You say this girl show is intended for the tired business man?"
"That's the idea," replied the manager. "But we don't wish to discriminate, and during the holiday season we are glad to receive the patronage of the tired college boy."

A Real Party.
Harry had attended the Christmas party of a little friend and enjoyed it very much, especially the candy and other goodies. A few days later the mother of his little host met him and asked:

"Did you have a good time, Harry, at Orrin's party?"
"I should say so!" responded Harry, enthusiastically. "Why, mamma had to sit up with me three nights I was so sick."

The Christmas note is peace and good will. Whatever discords, wrongs or resentments the year has held for us, the blessed Christmastide should end them all. If you have pushed aside any hand this year, reach out and clasp it now. If any dear tie has been loosened, knit it up again on this gladdest of all anniversaries. Let all wounds be healed, and all resentment and pride be buried under the Christmas holly, while we celebrate the birthday of the Prince of Peace.

ON CHRISTMAS

By WALLACE IRWIN

To Editor, who realizes how it must be more expensive to give than to receive.

DEAR MR. SIR: Merry Xmas thoughts fill me with something else. My brain refuse to ring bells in connection with this annual jangling. Perhaps it is because of following anecdote which happen to me:

At home of Mrs. & Mr. J. Poke, Rockpile, N. J., which is on the list of places where I am no longer there, I was employed in their midst. That family contained only two (2) complete children, but they were sufficiently plenty. By name they was Hester and Lester, aged 5 & 7 respectively. These young persons, when healthy, was full of childly amusements including dish-break, runaway, knockabouts, and whittling pencils with Father's safety razor.

But by approach of Xmas time they suddenly became otherwise. I notice this because I seen it. They walk around with Y. M. C. A. expression of toes and seem too good to be happy.

"Oh childish children!" I require from them, "why do you do so? Do you enjoy some sleeping sickness to make you thusly silent?"

"Hush it!" they depose. "Xmas are coming!"

"Are Xmas, then, such saddish event that you should await it without cheers?" I ask to know.

"Oh, not is!" they ollicute. "But, unless we behave very Sunday-school, Hon. St. Claus will not arrive with gifts of great cash valuation."

I stand gnat for this phenomenal. So I go to Hon. Mrs. Poke and require from her, "Hon. Mrs. Madam, I say so, 'who are this Hon. St. Claus who seem so Carnegie in his gifts?'"

"He resemble Hon. Flying Dutchman," she suggest, with slyly winking.

"No such person ever was."

"How so?" I snatch off for horrors. "Then I must inform Hon. Hester & Lester about this mistaken personality."

"Not to do!" she snagger peevily.

"Why should not?" I ask to know, with eyebrows.

"Because thus," she say it. "I told them about this Hon. St. Claus from my own voice."

"How you could be so deceptive?" I terrify.

"I do this to make my children less sinful in their comportment," she suggest. "When they go around making gunman noises, I holla, 'Stop before Hon. St. Claus hear you and refuse to come!' If they tell untruthful lies, I humiliate them by reproaching, 'Hon. St. Claus will snub you for this untruthfulness!'"

"Are it not somewhat sinful to relate them fibulous tale to tender child?" I negotiate.

"Ah, no!" she abstract. "If childhood should not believe in St. Claus, then most happy times would relapse forever. Togo, you must do everything what possible to make them believe in this whisker-gentleman."

"I shall attempt to think up something deliciously deceptive," are smart answer I make.

On date previously before Xmas I go to town-village with weekly salary, price $5, and purchase considerable wheel-cart, squeak-doll, jump-up-Jack, and other childish amusement. These I poke under overcoat and retreat home slyly like snails walking over upholstery.

When night-time was there, Hon. Hester & Lester was cruelly sent to bedtime and locked asleep so they would not find out about Hon. St. Claus. As soon as they make sleep, Mrs. & Mr. Poke command me for bring forth Xmas-tree. I make him grow from soap-box in dining-room. I assist intelligently hanging this foliage with tin fruit, including numerous candles standing on limbs to resemble fireworks. While Hon. Poke boss my enthuslasm, I fetch forth considerable heavy toy-boxes from basement of cellar. Back-broke feelings by me. Yet I continue this labors until mixed assortment of Xmas stood by tree with deceptive labels about Hon. St. Claus.

At 1 o'clock hour a. m. Mrs. and Mr. retire bedward, exhausted from observing my work. But my dutiful labors had just commenced. I must prepare to show those childish children how Hon. Mr. Claus down-slide down chimbley-pipe.

All house was full of darkness. Frozen moonlight outside. With sneekret footsteps, like snakes swimming in oil, I approach to closet and fetch forth following articles of clothes:

- 1 minkish ottomobile coat
- 2 boots of rubberly exterior
- 1 cap from Eskimo leather
- 1/2 lb. cotton resembling whisker.

I drop all them presents I bought inside one laundry-bag, place myself into those garments of clothes, then with detective toes I descend up through attic to where chimbley-pipe was on roof.

4 o'clock time now approach. Making affectionate hugs to Hon. Chimbley, I could tell it was Xmas by the feel of the thermometer. By peeking down Hon. Chimbley, I could see how it was sufficiently large hole to permit my Japanese smallness—yet I must compress myself to do so. I enjoyed considerable nervousness like heroes expecting to dive down Mt. Vesuvius.

Pretty soonly 6 a. m. was there and I was not yet froze completely hard. By listening down chimbley-pipe with telephone expression, I could hear childhood voices coming down-stairs saying "Oh!!!" It were time for me to make some slide.

I pull 1/2 lb. cotton to my chin, snuggle Hon. Bag to back, and commence climbing into chimbley. What was? Distinctually I could smell slight smudj of smoke coming upwards! Yet it were too late. Already I was slipping, down-sliding slowly. Great chokes enjoyed. When nearly down I stuck up suddenly. More chokes.

"Oh, hellup, hellup!" I gollup.

"Who there?" demand Hon. Poke below-down.

"Hon. St. Claus containing smoke!" I yellup. "Make haste or else be quick!"

Some individual persons grab me at toes. With intense drag I was pulled forth to fireplace where blazes was. My cottonly whisker become inflamed, and in desperado attempt I clash against Xmas-tree which tottle over amidst horrible fire-alarms. Great holla by all. Then I am a hero, as usual. While all others make hook-and-ladder noise, I embrace Hon. Tree with elbows and reject him outwards, through window. Of finally all was silent, except slight smell of smudj.

"What impossibility are you attempting to act like?" require Hon. Mrs. sarcastly.

"Hon. St. Claus," I report.

"Why you no entrance by door?" screech Hon. Mr. with wounded knuckle.

"Doors is not respectable for Saints to come in by," I devote.

"They are plenty for Japanese to go out by," resort him, escorting me outwards with brutal jam.

And when I was deploying away from there I hear Hester & Lester, report in voice together:

"We have saw Hon. St. Claus. We do not care to meet such a person!"

So I depart off feeling like an impossibility.

Hoping you are the same,

Yours truly,

"Hardware That Will Stand Hardwear."
R. S. MALEY
South Beach Street, Across from Yacht Club

Woodhull, called "old" by her neighbors, is only sixty-eight, and as this and slender as a girl. It is sad experience, rather than years that wrenches youthfulness from the heart and quenches the thirst for life, so it was that Mrs. Woodhull spent most of her days quietly rocking and knitting. Her padded wooden rocker faced a daguerrotype that hung on the brightly papered wall of the cozy front room.

Christmas was a lonesome time for the shriveled little old lady who had, forty years ago, to give up the curled goodness in the daguerrotype, who happened to be her husband, to a woman much younger, who happened to need a sweetheart.

Christmas brings a train of memories, and Mrs. Woodhull lived over the old and days as she cooked and knitted. She recalled the happy hours, too, which was worse. She talked to herself a good deal.

"If that Armster girl had only let him alone," she would wail softly. "He was all right till she set her cap for him. I bet she's suffering somewhere."

"But I must read my Bible and try to forgive her. Lord help me to forgive her," and so she would pray.

The children of the neighborhood liked to go to see Mrs. Woodhull for she always opened the cookie jar or brought out a pan of apples.

Of all the children in the neighborhood who came to see her Mrs. Woodhull liked Lisbeth Baker best. Her mother being dead, Lisbeth lived with her gloomy, rheumatic grandmother at the end of the street.

She had only been here a year, having been handed over from her mother's mother, out West, to her father's mother at the end of the street. Lisbeth was fair and wistful, and, like Mrs. Woodhull she was very much alone.

Today, the day before Christmas, Lisbeth stood at the window. "My other grandma's coming tomorrow," she said; "my grandma Hull. We just got the letter today."

"Two grandmas for Christmas," said Mrs. Woodhull. "You'll not come near me. What'll I do, all alone?"

"We'll all come over and see you Christmas afternoon," said Lisbeth, dancing home to tell Grandmother Baker.

Mrs. Woodhull became, in this way, the possessor of a Christmas plan. "I must have a little treat for them," she said. She got out her good white dishes, and set the big table in the sitting room. In the center she placed a blooming red geranium. "I'll make it into a Christmas tree," she joyously exclaimed, and she wrapped into three neat parcels a length of each of her knitted lace inscribing them with "Merry Christmas" and the name of each guest.

Next day she put the finishing touches to her table. She had a glass dish of candy, and one of nuts and raisins.

At three o'clock Lisbeth arrived with the new grandmother. Grandma Baker couldn't come on account of rheumatism. The ladies sat talking, and Lisbeth hovered happily about. Then she wandered out to the middle room where stood the fine table, and she came dancing in to hug Mrs. Woodhull. "You just ought to see it, grandma," Lisbeth's eyes were shining.

"We'll go and visit it, as soon as the coffee is ready," explained Mrs.

Woodhull, happy in the child's pleasure.

She excused herself and went to the kitchen. Lisbeth danced round and round the gay table, and Grandma Hull was left alone in the front room.

Presently she followed Mrs. Woodhull to the kitchen and closed the door between them and Lisbeth. "Don't you know me?" she asked, sadly. "Has no one told you? I was Lizette Armster. I have suffered more than you. He is dead. We both loved him. May we not be friends?"

Through the closed door Mrs. Woodhull could hear Lisbeth happily singing. She looked at Lizette Armster, shaken with sobs. She put friendly arms about her, and soothed her with kindly, broken words.

"Come, now," she said at last, leading the way to the table with the shining coffee pot. "Let's be merry. We must not spoil Lisbeth's Christmas treat."

When Christmas Comes

WHEN Christmas comes, I never mind the cold.
I like to get up prompt an' go to school.
An' do my sums.
An' clean the walks 'thout waitin' to be told—
Though I like sleddin' better, as a rule.
Or buildin' forts— But nothin' ain't so bad
When Christmas comes.

When Christmas comes, I'd just as lief give half
My cookie to the baby, an' take care
About the crumbs.
It's fun to make the little fellow laugh.
An' I don't mind his taggin' ev'rywhere
He can't help bein' little! I'm not mad
When Christmas comes.

When Christmas comes, I don't forget to give
My shoes a wipe, an' scrub my ears a lot
Till my head hums.
An' mother says, "That's boy's too good to live!"
But I'm not 'fraid of dyin', 'cause I'm not
No different from always—only glad
When Christmas comes!
—Abigail Williams Burton, in December
St. Nicholas.

My Christmas Wish

By
GEORGE MATHEW ADAMS

This is my great, earnest
Christmas wish—that the Christmas Spirit may enter
me and that it may fill me, enthral me, and then that
I may dip into its wealth of Love and give it away
—to Everybody—everywhere. So that even War can never be again. And Peace shall eternally endure in the Hearts of men.

A Popular Book.

Church—Have you given much attention to the books in evidence during this season?
Gotham—Oh, yes.
"And which do you consider the most popular this Christmas?"
"Oh, the pocketbook, by all means."

You will be amazed at the novel, unique and attractive ideas, shown by me in Sport and Dress Hats, also in high grade Silk and Wool Sweaters during the coming season.

COLUMBIA GRAPHOPHONES AND GRAFONOLAS AND COLUMBIA DOUBLE-DISC RECORDS

Beginning at $15 and ending at $350, you have many new and attractive instruments from which to choose—and any model may be purchased on the easiest kind of easy terms.

Whatever kind of music you like best—grand opera, great overtures, the piano playing of Josef Hofmann, or the violin art of Ysaye, or dance music, or ragtime, or brass bands, or something for a laugh—it's at its best on Columbia
Double-Disc records played on the Columbia Grafonola.

Unless you have heard—within a period of only a few months—
the flawless recording and reproduction of the human voice, and the faultless rendition of all instrumental music, attained by the present models of Columbia Grafonolas, you cannot have anything like a full appreciation of the revolutionary advance that has been made in the art of sound reproduction.

A Word Regarding Our Service—Our stock of Columbia

Grafonolas and Columbia Records is all new. It will give us pleasure to play the records for you, whether you purchase or not, and we will gladly assist you in making selections, no matter how small the purchase.

If you do not find it convenient to call, we will gladly send to your home on approval a Columbia

Yes, Do It Now

DO your shopping early while the good things are on tap,
Grab the early bargains while they're on the bargain map.
Don't be one of those kites that hit the shopping trails
When all the clerks are weary after forty thousand sales.
What's the use of loafing while the early shoppers win?
When you are sweating lava, those same early birds will grin!

Christmas eve the pleasant girls who ladle out the toys
Will be so worn and weary they'll have no Christmas joys.
Haven't they a right to holler at your putter and delay?
Pray leave them strength to celebrate a bit on Christmas day!
If you put off your shopping till the very last hour,
I hope you draw a lemon that is second-hand and sour!

The tardy shopper blithely said, "A Merry Christmas girlie!"
The clerk replied, "If you were dead or did your shopping early
We could enjoy a little fun around our Christmas table,
But slow-pokes keep me on the run, till Christmas joy's a fable."

GEN. VLADIMIR SAKHAROFF

Lieut. Gen. Vladimir Sakharoff, one of the ablest of Russian commanders, is leading the forces of the czar in Dobruja.

Good Reason.

A woman from the city was spending the summer in a small town, and one day, while doing her marketing, she asked the butcher how he happened to choose his business. He hesi-tated a moment, and then: "Well, I don't know," he answered, "but I always was fond of animals."

He Was Impressed.

"Was the sermon today to your liking, John?" inquired the pastor. "Indeed, sir, it was a grand sermon," said John, with genuine admiration. "What part seemed to take hold of you?"
"Well, now since you ask me, I'll tell you. What took hold of me most was your perseverance—the way you went over the same thing again and again and again."—Christian Herald.

Quotations to Go With Christmas Gifts

A PRETTY and original touch may be added to any Christmas gift by accompanying it with one of the quotations of an author.
A few selected quotations suitable for gifts are suggested here.

For a postal card album:

Kind messages that pass from hand to hand.
—Langston.

For a set of books by a well-known author:
The chief glory of every people is its authors. — Dr. Johnson.

For a small afternoon tea caddy:

Ten, then eat, then sleep, sage and wearable food. — Colley Cibber.

For a useful purse:

The best friends are in the purse. — Quaker
Proverb.

Happy the man, who, void of carousals,
in silver or in leather purse remains.

A splendid shilling. — John Philip.

With a pack of cards:

The cards beat all the players, to they need
so skillful. — Emerson.

With a pair of gloves:

Oh, that I were a glove upon that hand.
— Romeo and Juliet.

With a silver handglass:

The heart like a mirror should reflect all objects without being stained by any. — Seneca.

With a "year off" calendar:

The longest day must have an end. — Latin Proverb.

A Christmas gift of a ring for a fiancee or wife:

So let our love
As endless prove
And pure as gold forever.

— Robert Herrick.

For the last baby:

Much is she worth, and even more is made of her. — W. E. Henley.

With an umbrella:

The year, most part deformed with dripping
rains. — Cowper.

With a cookbook:

The taste of the kitchen is better than the smell. — Old Proverb.

With an electric torch lamp:

To a great night a great lantern. — Old Proverb.

With a needlecase:

Who  hath need of a hundred eyes.
— Old Proverb.

A Subtle Revenge.

"How did you break your wish of buying you cigars for a Christmas present?"

"I gave her a box of cheap cigarettes."

The Other Way.

"Have you finished your Christmas shopping?"

"No; it finished me."

Rather Apt Comparison.

"A meteoric career is not wholly to be desired," admitted Professor Felt.

"The meteor suddenly flames forth from obscurity, dashes grandly about the sun, and sky in a squirt of momentary brilliancy, pops loudly and subsides into oblivion, very much as does the average favorite son."

Nothing makes a better gift than a ready-to-wear. It's something that will be appreciated because it is serviceable.

A Few Thoughtful Suggestions

A Smart Boliver Coat, specially priced for Christmas Sale, $25.00 to $33.00.

Where a red-stained rag was wound.
"Tonight, somewhere beyond us,
There is holly on the door,
And children smile in sleep," he said,
"Unmindful of the war.
And somewhere there is laughter,
And hymns of praise are being sung,
Mistletoe and ropes of green
Are somewhere being hung;
Yet we who stand on guard tonight,
Expectant, sleeve to sleeve,
Our hearts by battle hardened,
Forget it's Christmas Eve!
Thru miles of hostile distance
Where the tender home thought climbs,
I hear the frost-claimed echo
Of silver Christmas chimes.
Pardon, comrades, for my fancy
Runs wild and free tonight;
'Twas but a bursting shell I heard
Off there upon our right."
Then he shouted from the ramparts
Where life and death held tryst,
At the lines of hidden legions
Thru the settling powder mist.
"Must our presents be but leaden
Like the rest that you have sent?
Then may Christmas faith among you
Spoil your aiming and prevent!
Unless you court a greater sin
Than you or I conceive,
Ground arms and fly the truce flag,
Make the password 'Christmas Eve!'
Let memory of days that were
The thirst of vengeance quench.
So the glory of the season
May invade each bristling trench;
Let every heart be softened,
Every war tense should receive
The silent, hallowed message
That is sent on Christmas Eve!"
Then, as tho his cry was answered,
Clear a bugle order rang
From far off in the distance:
"CEASE FIRING!" it sang.
And the War God loosed its fingers
At the mandate of the horn,
The Star of Bethlehem gleamed down
And Christ our Lord was born.

If You Want a Home in In a Land Where You Can Enjoy NOW IS THE Never Again While Time

Away from the clank and clamor of the frenzied business world, away from the wintry winds, ice and snow, and away from selfishness, toil and care, is the picturesque and charming City of Seabreeze, situated between the Halifax River, and the Atlantic Ocean, on the John Anderson and Dixie Highways, 110 miles south of Jacksonville, "just across the way" from Daytona. Summer or winter, it matters not, Seabreeze is ever a city of splendor and beauty, an ideal city of homes—ideal for health, rest, recreation, pleasures, hospitality and community life. Here one will find a delightful and almost unlimited playground, handsome homes, the finest of American citizenry, the friendly spirit that makes life worth while, the quiet orderliness of decency and the lack of snobbery and class distinction which mars many a beautiful resort in other parts of the country.

PLAN OF OUR CHRISTMAS BANKING CLUB

THE PLAN IS SIMPLE—You begin with any amount from one cent up and increase your deposit the same amount each week. Or you can begin with a larger amount from 50c up and deposit the same amount each week. In other words persistent saving, even though the amount be ever so small, means money to you.

HOW TO JOIN

Look at the different clubs in table below and select the one you wish to join, the 1c, 2c, 5c, 10c, 50c, $1.00, $5.00, or any other of the clubs; then come to our Bank with the first weekly payment. We will make you a member of the club and give you a Christmas Banking Club Book showing the club you have joined.

You Can Begin With the Largest Payment First and Decrease Your Payments Each Week

THE REASONS FOR THE CLUB

To provide a way for those of moderate and even small means to bank their money.

To teach "the saving habit" to those who have never learned it.

It makes your pennies, nickels and dimes, often foolishly spent grow into dollars; dollars grow into a fortune. Start your fortune today.

To give you a Bank connection and show you how our Bank can be of service to you.

For Old and Young—The sensible thing is to join our Christmas Banking Club and also put every member of your family into it. This will teach them the value of money and how to bank and HAVE MONEY. Maybe this little start you give them now may some day set them up in business or buy them a home.

How often have you wished that your parents had taught you early the value of banking your money. You would be well-off today. Don't make the same mistake with YOUR children.

A CHRISTMAS FABLE

by Mary Graham Bonner

Drawings by Ray Walters

THE snow glistened in the sparkling sunlight. The flakes of snow kept falling, falling. Some stopped to rest on the branches of the pine trees and the little leafless bushes. Some fell straight to the ground and made the snow grow deeper and whiter and softer.

In the center of the woods was a high throne upon which sat a King dressed in red with tunic of soft white which looked like snow, upon his head was a crown of gleaming jewels.

Around the King sat the Royal Family. There were Princes and Princesses, the Queen and hundreds of pages. The King arose from his throne and spoke: "This is the greatest festival in the year."

He said, "and its name is Christmas. It is the day of love and cheer and happiness. We give presents and we are given presents. We think of others and others think of us. It is the day to give! And your King, will now begin the celebrations."

The Queen was smiling. Her eyes were full of gladness and the Princes and Princesses were merry and gay.

"The day of giving," they were all saying. "The most glorious day in the year!"

The pages rushed about this way and that, and from afar came the sound of music. The music grew louder and the voices seemed to come from everywhere. From all corners of the world it seemed as if everyone must be singing, and the King and Royal Family joined in the song. No one quite knew what was the name of the song. No one quite knew what the tune might be, but somehow everyone was singing it—for the song was the song of joy and the tune was happiness. And all knew that song, all knew its tune and throughout the world that day there was singing. Some did not know how to sing the words, some did not know how to make the sounds with their voices, but for these there was the music in their hearts—the love in their hearts for all the people under the sun.

But the pages had emptied before the throne packs with many different sorts of presents. And the King was presenting them to the Princes and Princesses. Then came more and more presents, and more and more of the Royal Family appeared. For they were all arriving for the Great Festival. There were hundreds and thousands and they received presents and they gave presents. The singing went on, the music was mingled with laughter and the happy voices of children were heard.

Soon the children came trooping by. They passed before the throne and the King did not seem to frighten them. He did not seem to be a King of whom to be afraid. All his subjects seemed to love him and he seemed to rule with a sceptre of wonderful kindness. And as the children paused before the throne they said in whispers to each other:

"Look! On the throne is carved the words 'Merry Christmas to all in the world this day!' And on the scepter is written 'Love, this is the guide to happiness.'"

And then on a mighty pine tree lights appeared and the snow flakes on the branches changed and drooped down heavily laden with presents.

And the tree spoke too:

"I am the Christmas tree. For years and years I have gone into homes each Christmas Day.

There are many trees but we all have the one name—the Christmas tree—and our King bids us go to many a Christmas festival. Our branches hold gifts and candles of different colors to give the bright light of good cheer."

And from all around the children are opening stockings that they had found hanging on low branches, filled with oranges and candies, nuts and toys. While they were dancing and laughing as they opened many mysterious little packages, the King spoke again:

"Good-bye to all," he said. "I will be back for the festival next year. Come my fine animals! Come my gorgeous chariot!"

Jingling of bells was heard—they were the Christmas bells on the Reindeers and up they pranced to take the King to his home far away. For the King was none other than Santa Claus!

And all of a sudden the scene changed and instead of one great throne many homes could be seen—big homes and little homes, but in all there was a Queen—the mother of the children whom on Christmas Day Santa Claus calls his Royal Family.

Instead of Princes and Princesses they were all children. Instead of one great tree there were many trees. And in place of the sparkling snow and the woods there were fireplaces and green decorations and bright red berries.

For once a year Santa Claus dreams this dream—this Christmas fable. He sees not the hundreds of homes he has visited. He does not see the different mothers. He does not see the children scattered over the earth. He has been to many homes but to him it is all as one. And it is a true dream, too!

For every Christmas Queen is a mother with love in her heart, and there are the fathers who sit on the throne of Santa Claus on Christmas Day with "A Merry Christmas" inscribed in letters which only the children of Santa's dream can see, but which all the children of the world can feel. And the Royal Family—the Princes and the Princesses—they are all children. Not unusual children, but usual children. They are the children who give joy just because they are children, and they are given pleasure because they too can give.

Yes, all over the world, in hundreds of homes after the visit of Santa Claus there is happiness. And because it is Christmas Day there is cheer and good will. And the gifts that Santa Claus receives are the smiling eyes and the merry voices of children as they shout their delight over the Christmas festival.

He is the King—not of a country, nor of a land—but of a Day,

Christmas Day,

and his subjects are the Children of the World.

For him there is this fable.

He can dream of the joy that is in the hearts of all on Christmas morning, while he is sitting on his throne and his chariot drawn by Reindeers is waiting to take him back home!

What is Yours?
Never wish for more than you could ever use, for only what you use is really yours.

Complimentary.
A much loved Irish physician was calling on a peasant patient. The grateful woman, wishing to pay him a fine compliment, said enthusiastically: "Ah, doctor, it's a rare job's comforter ye are!"

OTH Burnham twins pressed their noses against the window pane of their playroom and watched, the snowflakes come whirling down out of the gray clouds above. Across the street, in the upstairs front room of the house, the twins could see that a fire was blazing on the hearth, and a little group of people sat before it. It was the day before Christmas.

"It's Paula's grandma," said five-year-old Alma to her sister. "I saw her when she came," returned Alice. "She has come to spend Christmas. That is her room with the cozy fire. See, Paula is sitting in her lap. I wish we had a grandmother."

"So do I," said Alma sadly. "But ours are both dead. I'd—I'd just like to borrow Paula's grandma for a while!"

"That would be fine," agreed Alice. "Only what would Paula do?"

"I've—a good—mind—to—go—out and find a grandmother for myself!" Alma said slowly.

"Alma," cried her sister, "Hush!" Ten minutes later the twins, unseen by any one and clad in their smart coats and caps with white leggings pulled over their rubbers, went down the street under a huge umbrella which Alma declared belonged to cook, for she had found it in the kitchen entry. Their mother was downtown somewhere shopping, and Nora, the nursemaid, was supposed to remain with them. But Nora had stepped out to mail a letter, and when she came back the twins had disappeared. But how could any one dream that they had gone out to search for a grandmother?

Once when father had asked them what they wanted most for Christmas they both declared in unison:

"Oh, a grandma, please, daddy!" But daddy and mother had both looked so sad that the twins were much ashamed.

"Where shall we go first?" demanded Alice, holding tight to her sister's hand under the big umbrella.

"I've been thinking," said Alma, turning down a side street. "Do you remember once when we were teeny, teeny little girls such a pretty old lady stopped us on the street and asked us both and said we looked like our Grandmother Burnham?"

"She had a cane," added Alice, "and nurse said she was mother's auntie, only they didn't speak."

Alma knew where the pretty old lady lived, for she had seen her several times walking in the garden. Through the gate and trudging up the snowy path went the twins, the big umbrella bobbing uncertainly as they approached the house. A fire was crackling on a hearth. Seated before the fire in a great armchair was the pretty old lady, looking very lonely indeed.

"She looks very lonesome," whispered Alice, for they were on the porch now and were peering in the window. Alma went to the door and rang the bell, and presently it opened and a very stout, comfortable looking maid looked down at them.

"Well, little Red Riding Hoods," she smiled. "What do you want?"

"Please," said Alma boldly, "we came to see our grandmother."

"Bless me! Miss Hemmenway your grandmother? You better go right in and tell her. She's mighty lonesome this Christmas eve!" She opened the parlor door and admitted the two.

Miss Aurelia Hemmenway lifted her head and stared at the twins.

"We need a grandma," faltered Alma, "and you would make such a lovely one."

"Please do!" whispered Alice shyly, and somehow the little arms found their way around her neck and soft baby cheeks were pressed against hers.

"You are James Burnham's little girls?" asked the pretty lady. They nodded, and she buried her face in their curls. "I am almost your grandma, children; your own grandma was my sister; I am your mother's aunt. But I will be your grandma if you like, dears."

An hour later James Burnham and his wife rushed up on Miss Hemmenway's porch and looked through the window. Sitting before the fire was Aunt Aurelia, with whom they had quarreled years ago. On either arm of her chair was a twin, gloriously happy in the possession of a grandmother. It was a beautiful Christmas for all of them. The twins neglected their tree and their toys for their new treasure, and as for Miss Hemmenway—she declared it was the happiest Christmas of her life.

Up to Her.

Like All the Rest.
"I caught the street-car conductor who owes me money on the car platform last night." "Did you get your money?" "No; he did the same thing my other creditors do." "What's that?" "Put me off."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Blessing of Work.
Work is a guardian angel. Work turns the wilderness into a garden. Work does sometimes what even love cannot do: it makes a man firmly in his place in the world and gives him the blessed sensation: This plot of ground in the wide immensity of earth was meant for me to grow in.—Robert Hichens.

Speaking of garters—have you heard of the Harvard students who spied a pair with silver clasps in a Harvard square shopwindow, and thinking to raise a smile, at least, from the charmer at the counter, asked the price of a dog collar, pointing at the same time to the silver-clasped garter? She turned looked sweetly at the young men, and said: "We do not separate them for puppies, sir."—Boston Herald.

Great Question Concerning Work.
One of the worst of chronic human evils is working for daily bread without any interest in the work, and with ill will toward the institution or person who provides the work. The work of the world must be done, and the great question is, Shall it be done happily or unhappily?—Charles W. Ebbot.

"Friendly advice," said Uncle Eben. "doesn't do much good, 'ceptin' as it relieves de man dat gits it offn' his mind."

Easy to Tell the Age.

You can usually tell approximately the age of the farmer boy by what he orders at the soda fountain. If he's under twenty-one, he'll take strawberry; if he's between twenty-one and thirty-five, he'll take lemon. If he's over thirty-five, he won't be there.—Kansas City Star.

Value of Bees on the Farm.

A complete farm should have a few stands of bees. They can supply the family with honey, and the surplus will return good profit. Twenty dollars a hive each year can be realized, when proper methods are used and good care given the "hired girls." Bees pay for themselves in insuring perfect pollination in the orchard. Every hive of bees is a nation unto itself. Every farmer would be a better farmer if he kept bees and profited by the lessons they teach.—American Farmer.

Christmas Is Dying Out, Say Birsky and Zapp

"And Who Does It? The Fellow That Invented the Saying: 'Do Your Shopping Early.'" في في في

New Everybody Buys Presents Out of Season and Holiday Sales of "Sticker" Goods Are Doomed. في في في

By MONTAGUE GLASS

Illustrations by BRIGGS

CHRISTMAS ain't what it used to be," Barnett Zapp remarked, as he sat opposite Louis Birsky in Wasserbauer's restaurant.

"Sure I know," Birsky said, spreading a slice of rye bread with mustard as he waited for an order of kreplosh soup, with gefulte tebeches to follow. "Former times if a retail dry-goods concern didn't get half their salesladies faint on 'em every night for two weeks before Christmas, their creditors would come down on them and ask them to discount their bills. Nowadays if a cash girl gets a headache, that's big already."

Birsky nodded sadly. "Christmas is dying out," he declared. "The people is getting too wise, Zapp. It used to be that if you wanted to push your stickers, whether it was handkerchiefs, socks, neckties, or gloves, all you had to do was to wait till the first of December, mark 'em up 50 per cent over the regular retail price for fresh goods, put 'em in red paper-boxes, y'understand, and your customers practically used blackjacks on each other to get at the counter where the goods was displayed. Christmas silver articles was also good sales. I seen butter dishes go like hot cakes, which the salesladies was warned not to dust them off with feathers even, on account it might scratch the silver plate and show the brass underneath. But that's a thing of the past now. And who done it, instead of sleighs, because a shopper ain't got no imagination, Zapp. She buys what's in season, and if she was doing her Christmas shopping as early as the Fourth of July, y'understand, she would come home with fireworks."

"Thinking What His Parents Are Going to Hand Him Next Morning."

"Say," Zapp said, flipping the fingers of his right hand at Birsky. "storekeepers ain't allowed to sell no more fireworks around the Fourth of July. It's against the law."

"I know it," Birsky continued. "and if people couldn't shoot off firecrackers around the Fourth of July and couldn't shop around Christmas, all it needs is you tried to collect a bill from somebody around Christmas time, it didn't make no difference if he was retired from business except for a 10 per cent interest in a bathing suit factory, he would want you to wait till his Christmas rush was over. Also people didn't give no orders because it was around Christmas, Birsky, and just because it was near Christmas and they claimed they could use all the money they could get, your creditors wanted you to pay bills which you hardly knew you owed on account of not receiving the second monthly statement yet. Furthermore if you owned a tenement house, you'd got difficulty collecting the November rent because the tenants said it was so near Christmas, and that's the way it went, Birsky. People treated Christmas not as a holiday, but as an excuse. The wonder is it ain't died out altogether."

"The wholesaler wouldn't miss it if it did," Birsky commented. "Believe me, Zapp, for every child that lays awake the night before Christmas thinking what his parents are going to hand him the next morning, there is fifty manufacturers counting sheep jumping over fences, trying not to think what some of their customers in the retail dry-goods trade is going to hand them after the second of January. It don't require much water to drown a shabby dry-goods retailer. He can sink like a stone in two days' rain during the week before Christmas."

"Don't I know it?" Zapp said. "If the Christmas presents that the wholesalers give by mistake to shabby retail dry-goods men was put on trees the way other Christmas presents are, they would cover all the redwood groves in California. But it ain't the retailers' fault, Birsky. Sometimes the fellow is playing in hard luck like a merchant like I used to sell goods to by the name Felix Hammerlick out in Cincinnati, which a couple of years ago lost Christmas he specialized on sleighs, skates and cheap furs, and from December 15 on they got such a warm spell in Cincinnati that the hotel keepers figured should they or should they not open the roof gardens again. So the following year Hammerlick cut out the sleighs and skates and laid in bicycles, children's books and a very attractive line of underwear and Hammerlick says that it's a wonder with his luck he didn't also lay stock in a chain of artificial ice factories, because on the day he received the goods in November the thermometer goes down to zero on his end says that way till a week after his best selling millinery opening. Can you blame such a fellow then he settles with his creditors 50 cents on the dollar?"

"Listen, Zapp," Birsky said, "a 50-cent-on-the-dollar fellow could always pin his butt up on either a warm Christmas, a cold Easter or an lively wife, whereas the figures show that the average of real cold Christmases ain't no more than the average of real sick wives."

"Sure I know, Birsky, but bearing out the average is what has done the most harm to poker, pinocle, the Fourth of July, Christmas and all them things that former time people enjoyed running chances on. Take, for instance, the Fourth of July, and a lot of people which considers even safety matches forbidden goes to work and figures that out of every million people that shoots off firecrackers, one and seven hundred and fifty-two and three-sandths people gets burned, so they put the fireworks manufacturers out of business, and now instead of setting off fireworks people goes to the shore or trolley parks on the Fourth; and as soon as it gets figured out that of every million people that goes to trolley parks and Coney Island, six and ninety-seven three-sandths gets Magesaure from eating frankfurters and run over by trolley cars on the Fourth

Road Engineer Alleged to Have Stolen Ford Automobile and Passed Bad Checks

Robert Coyne is credited with stealing a Ford car from Charles Cannons, passing a worthless check for $50 on V. M. Fountain company and another for $5.50 on Bracey Drug company and getting away with clean heels. He also stole a suit case with the initials of W. K. T. on it, the property of a fellow engineer, W. K. Travell, says the Deland News.

Coyne has been in Deland seven months working for the McCrary Engineering company and has made a few friends here. He was a well appearing young fellow of medium height, brownish hair cut close in the back and at the time of his sudden disappearance were a blue, pinch back suit with a heavy brown overcoat and tan shoes. About a week ago he approached Charlie Cannons relative to renting a Ford car to go over into Lake county on Sunday to do some hunting. About 6 o'clock he went to the garage and got the car. Meanwhile he had used the minutes well and had appropriated a good suit case. Next he got a new outfit of clothes, suit, overcoat and shoes and gave a bogus check on the Volusia County bank in exchange. Dr. Bracey then very politely took another check for $5.50 and after this transaction Robert Coyne ceased to be a familiar object in Deland and he beat it. Naturally he had 36 hours start before anything wrong was discovered when the checks were taken to the bank. Charlie Cannons immediately got busy and has been pulling the wires in all directions with description of the missing car and its driver. The motor number of the Ford is 1-325,167. The car is about six months old but in good condition. The only distinguishing mark on the machine was the extra large driving wheel.

There may be more checks out, if so they have failed to show up as yet. Coyne bore a good reputation in the city.

"People Treated Christmas Not as a Holiday, but as an Excuse."

Zapp? It was the fellow that invented the saying: 'Do your Christmas shopping early.'"

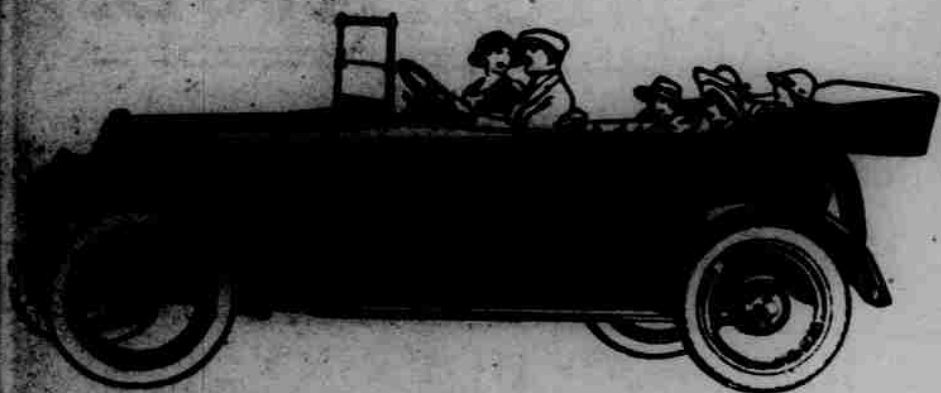

"Who did invent it?" Zapp asked. "I should know who invented it!"

Birsky exclaimed. "But whoever he was, Zapp, he put a bigger crimp in the cheap handkerchief business than the fellow who invented rhinitis tablets, that it should be a suspended sentence for eating turkey on Thanksgiving and the only pleasure we got left in America is decorating graves on the thirtieth of May."

"Still, in a way it's a good thing that Christmas is more or less a thing of the past," Zapp said, "because when

BILLY'S CHRISTMAS

By MRS. HAZEL B. BEATTY.

WE BILLY sat on the front stairs and pondered. Truly this was a funny world, and Wee Billy could not understand why he could not have a brother to play with. Jimmy, across the street, had one; and Teddy Jones, two houses above, had two. One, a great, big brother, who used to give Teddy pennies. And now to Wee Billy's sorrow the new family just moved in next door had five boys. Of course they were brothers, and none of them were grown up. What good times they must have. And here he, Billy, didn't have a soul but a cat outside of Mamma and Daddy Boy.

Poor Billy boy! The longer he pondered the more dejected he grew, but finally Snooksy, the great big tiger kitty, who allowed his small master to pull his sacred tail and otherwise subject him to such indignities, was aroused from his peaceful slumbers by a much-excited little boy, who just hopped around on one foot, and finally ended by grabbing kitty up in his arms. This was too much, for Snooksy was an awful, and down went Wee Billy, Snooksy and all.

Such a mix-up! For a few minutes nothing could be seen but a roly-poly boy all arms and legs and a much-alarmed cat who managed to crawl from under his little master and sought the farthest corner in the front hall from which he could view Wee Billy safely, and also be ready to run if such another scene seemed imminent.

Billy Boy had solved the problem. What was it his teacher had told him about the Christmas baby?

The small mind groped for the much-desired information, but in vain. Anyhow, it didn't matter. Of course Santa Claus brought the Christmas Baby, because he brought all things at Christmas time; so why not write Santa and tell him all about it.

Wee Billy Boy rushed to mamma's desk and was soon busy. Had he time to send his letter? It still looked a week to Christmas and everybody was busy, so "Billy Boy hasn't written," when he had asked his pretty mother; but he guessed it wouldn't take long for a letter to reach such a well-known old gentleman. So Billy Boy wrote:

"Dear Santa Claus, I want a little brother, not a big one, but one just like me, because I get lonesome, your little Billy boy."

He put the letter in the fireplace, happy in the knowledge that Santa Claus had received it because it "burned so beautifully."

Wee Billy guarded his precious secret carefully and counted the days. He hunted the doors and was in the way generally, minded to intercept, much to the dismay of his mother. But the week passed and a happy, little boy was missed and his mother and Daddy Boy were a strange, run, un-dressing and the hanging of the stockings.

Where was his precious treasure, when Santa Claus came? He and his little brother?

One Daddy Billy Boy was waiting, ready for Santa Claus, and of course, Daddy Boy knew just where the baby had been, and he had him. Wee Billy Boy was in his room, having a new baby with a new brother, who just sat on his lap and Snooksy.

Morning dawned and Billy Boy opened his eyes only to remember his day, and wonder:

"Merry Christmas, Mamma, Merry Christmas, Daddy Boy!"

He jumped out of bed, Daddy Boy just sitting at the door and staring to see, was all dressed.

"Did he bring me a baby?" Billy Boy asked.

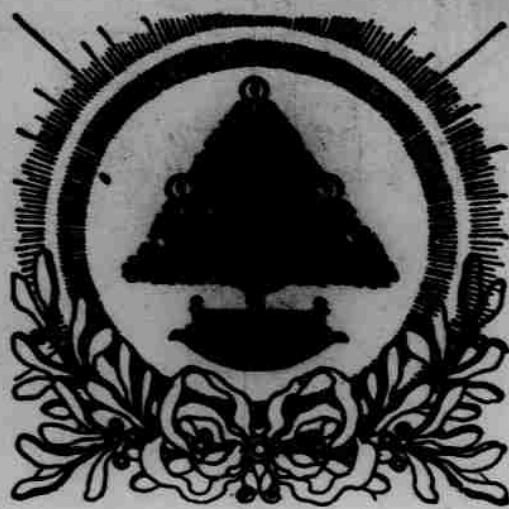

"Bring what, son?" asked Daddy Boy.

"A brother. I wrote Santa Claus a letter." And the blue eyes of the little boy as he looked at his mother, but saw no sign of the coveted brother.

"You come with me, son; perhaps you haven't looked in the right place."

And picking up Billy Boy in his arms, he tipped into mamma's room, and there in his precious mother's bed was a brand new baby brother.

Santa Claus hadn't forgotten Wee Billy Boy after all.

Deacon

How He Took Out
The Christmas Mail

Sewell Ford

OST things Deacon took as they came, and with great calmness of spirit, for he was an even-tempered old horse, whose disposition a dozen years, filled with the usual allotment of equine adversity, had thoroughly seasoned. Yet now he was pawing and stamping as impatiently as any four-year-old. At intervals he would stretch his neck, thrust forward his old white nose, and indulge in a complaining whinny. There was reason for Deacon's restlessness. More than an hour ago he should have been on the move, but here he was still waiting in the post office shed, and never a sign or word from his driver. Deacon, you understand, pulled Uncle Sam's mail over Rural Free Delivery Route No. 2, Havertown P. O. He had pulled it for three years, and he was fairly well versed in the business. At any rate, he knew that it was past his starting time. Long before had the sway-back sorrel on Route No. 1 taken the road. The port little bay mare on No. 3 had followed a few minutes later. Yet here was Deacon, with the heaviest and longest route of them all, still standing idly in the shed.

Inside, in the Havertown post office, were a number of men whose frame of mind was worse than Deacon's. One of them was the postmaster himself. In the first place, the simultaneous arrival of a three-foot snowfall and the bulk of the Christmas mail was bad enough. Next came the disabling of one of his best drivers, and the discovery that two substitute carriers were out of town. Well, the postmaster said things. Dan Sweeney, driver of No. 2 route, was disabled beyond doubt. There he was sitting on a pile of mail sacks, his back against a steam radiator, his face white and drawn out of shape by twinges of rheumatism. He had dragged himself down to the office, but that was all he could do. Now, although he should have been sent back to bed, he was sorting the mail for his route.

But Deacon Would Not Turn.

"The Christmas mail, too!" groaned Dan. He had a conscience, Dan had, and his heart was in his work.

It was a sight of the great pile of packages which made Danny groan deepest. They were more to him than simply so much fourth-class matter, these string-tied boxes and bundles. They were invested with something besides the statute-guarded sanctity of the United States mail, for which Dan Sweeney had no light respect. He knew that each one of them carried not only merchandise but a subtle freightage of the goodly holiday spirit, the joyful sentiment of Christmastide.

And to think, just because of this plaguery rheumatism of his, many of them might not be delivered until the holiday was over with, when they would come lagging along, as stale as firecrackers on the 5th of July! So Danny groaned.

"There!" said Danny at last, to the office clerk who was to attempt the task, "you stow the packages in just that order and do your best to find where they go. Old Deacon'll take you over the route all right if you give him his head. He knows it like a book."

So the Christmas mail was finally started out over Route No. 2, Deacon turned an inquiring eye on the new man, as much as if to ask what was the matter with Danny.

No sooner had they reached Joel's road, where the route began, than Deacon realized the inexperience of the new man. Why, he was actually going to drive right past the Powers' place, and the Powers almost always had mail of some kind, even if it wasn't more than a poultry magazine or a seed catalogue. After one or two such mistakes Deacon took charge of things himself. From house to house he went, stopping wherever he had been in the habit of calling, waiting until the new carrier found who lived there and had looked through letters and parcels to see if he had anything for them.

All the forenoon and all the afternoon this went on, but when the red sun went down in the frosty west there still remained half a hundred letters and more than a peck of packages to be delivered. The new man was hungry and tired, but he was no quitter. So he begged some hay and oats for Deacon, borrowed a lantern, and together they started to finish the route. As for Deacon, his old knees were stiffer than ever, his shoulder muscles ached, his flanks heaved like a pair of blacksmith's bellows, but he plunged on, never skipping a single house, never hesitating at a roundabout half-mile, doing his whole duty quite as thoroughly as if there had been someone behind to urge him on instead of a cold-numbered clerk, who had no longer even touched the reins. At last only one letter was left, a thick, bulky one in a blue waterproof envelope, bearing a foreign postmark. "Josiah Braisted, Esq.," was the address.

"Braisted, eh?" muttered the clerk. "Wonder if the old horse knows where he lives?"

Evidently Deacon did, for he was plowing through a big drift, heading straight out on the Boston road into the darkness. Far ahead, on the top of a long hill, the clerk could see the lights of a big house. There were no other lights between. Miles behind he could make out the glow of the city. The clerk wished he could be back there, where one could be warm again and get something hot to eat. With numb fingers he pulled out his watch. Half-past nine! Why, it would take them a good two hours to drive back now! Braisted be hanged! He could get his letter after Christmas.

So he grabbed the reins and indicated to Deacon a desire to turn around. But Deacon would not turn. Pull on the rein as he might, Deacon would only swing his head about, keeping his legs moving straight ahead. By much shouting and sawing on the reins Deacon was stopped. Then the new driver waded out to his head, took him by the bits and tried to point the horse the other way. Deacon refused to budge. Those lights on the top of the long hill marked the end of the route, and Deacon knew it. And to those lights they went. "Josiah Braisted?" asked the driver curiously of the young woman who answered his ring.

"Oh, it's come, it's come!" she shouted to someone within, as she held out her hand eagerly for the letter.

Never before had he seen so much excitement caused by the delivery of a letter. In a moment there were three or four persons in the front hall, all talking at once.

"Do you think it will save him, doctor?" asked the anxious-faced old lady who had followed the girl to the door.

"It will if anything will, I guess," answered a stout, bearded man. And he mounted the stairs to see the patient in the upper room.

Then they insisted that the half-frozen clerk come inside and have something to eat. Deacon? Oh, they would take care of Deacon. They did all this and more. It seemed that this letter had been long expected, and was sadly needed, for it came from a prodigal son to a very sick father. It had its effect, too.

Of course the clerk told them of Deacon's heroic stubbornness, of how the old horse had insisted on going to the very end of the route when he had tried to turn him back. Josiah Braisted, Esq., heard the story during his convalescence.

"I must tell my son about that when he comes home," he would repeat as they told him of the part Deacon played in the story. "We ought to do something for that old horse," he said.

They did, too. The office clerk, who will first show you a handsome gold watch, tells the story best, always ending with, "And old Deacon, why, he lives out there on the Braisted place like a thoroughbred. He's in clover, he is."

"Well," Dan Sweeney will add, "it's no more'n he deserves. Old Deacon was a mighty good horse in his day, and mighty knowin'."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Design by Franklin Simon & Co., New York

WORN with a dashing brown velvet turban is this set of racoon, a scarf half lined with silk to give the wide effect and a plump muff matching. This set is also suitable for matrons as well as juveniles.

There are so many charming muffs made of various materials, other than fur and often combined with fur that it is difficult to pick out any for special notice. One that is unusually attractive, however, is made of tulle, velvet and fur. The foundation of the muff is tulle, and there are wide trimming bands of velvet, with a little fur along the edge of the frills at the hands. There is a collar to match, wide and fluffy; and there is a most interesting little hat of the three fabrics combined.
